The Rainbow Pages Waterloo-Wellington

is a directory published by SPECTRUM listing resources of interest to the LGBTQ communities of Waterloo -Wellington. Edition 3.1 © 2018, June Rainbow book image courtesy of shutterstock.com

Purpose: The Waterloo-Wellington LGBTQ communities have not had a composite resource directory since publication of the Rainbow Directory 2001/2002 by Waterloo-Wellington Regional Pride [the earlier name of the tri-Pride Community Association]. The Rainbow Pages – Waterloo-Wellington is intended to fill that gap.

Scope: In this edition, we are restricting resources to groups, agencies and professionals who offer services likely to be of interest to the local LGBTQ communities. In subsequent editions we expect to broaden the scope to include commercial establishments that do not offer professional services. NOTE: The only resources that we include that are not based in Waterloo-Wellington are Ontario-wide service agencies.

Audience: This publication has two target audiences: (1) members of the local LGBTQ communities who are interested in learning about resources that are available to them, and (2) professionals in the local service agencies who would like to be able to refer clients of theirs appropriately.

Origins: Initial gathering of this data began August 2012, when SPECTRUM – Waterloo Region's Rainbow Community Space first opened its doors. The information was placed at first on a bulletin board in the SPECTRUM Office. When SPECTRUM spun off from the Waterloo Region Rainbow Coalition in February 2013, SPECTRUM created its own website with the directory information online as part of the website. With time, the number of categories in the online directory grew and the amount of information increased.

In July 2014, SPECTRUM decided that it would be useful to publish a condensed version of the online directory – retaining every entry, but shortening each one to a manageable form. Additional information was gathered by sending review copies to local professionals in the social service sector. Edition 1.0 was published 2014, October.

Format: The publication is in booklet format (8.5" x 5.5"). Directory entries are grouped into categories, which are arranged alphabetically.

Availability: SPECTRUM is making Edition 3.1 available in print and electronic format. The most recent version is found at <http://ourspectrum.com/resources/rainbow-directory/>
